Lethal, sublethal and feeding effects of two Cry3Bb insecticidal proteins on Lepidoptera larvae. A novel version of Bt-Cry3Bb is a mixture of two Cry3Bb protoxins with specific activities for Helicoverpa armigera and Ophioglossum eurybiatum. The effect of Cry3Bb1 and Cry3Bb2 on Lepidopteran larvae was compared to that of Cry3Bb. We found the ratio between the specific activities of the two toxins was important, because a ratio close to 1 resulted in the best combination of insecticidal activity and phytotoxicity. First, the effects of the Cry3Bb protein in the absence of all other food in a diet of Cry3Bb-transgenic maize seed and a diet of unprotected maize were examined. Next, the effects of the insecticidal proteins at different concentrations were compared to the effects of Cry3Bb at an equivalent concentration, with and without all other food, in order to understand the mechanism by which Cry3Bb and the protoxins influenced Lepidopteran larvae. We found that the two Cry3Bb protoxins had toxic effects on the larvae at similar concentrations, and their toxicity was additive. These findings help to determine the insecticidal concentration of a transgenic strain of maize, and indicate that the contribution of another food source, in this case the nontransgenic maize variety, to the larval diet may reduce any negative effect on the crop. We discuss the implications of these findings for the efficacy of Bt maize. [Value of histological examination in the definition of the tumorous phase in gastric cancer]. A retrospective study was conducted to assess the validity of our histological diagnosis of gastric cancer. 783 specimens, previously diagnosed by endoscopic biopsies as early, preinvasive and invasive carcinoma, were reviewed by the author and 10.2% (77) of these showed features suggesting neoplastic progression. Specifically, 38 cases were reclassified as invasive and 19 as preinvasive carcinoma. No case was reclassified as of the early carcinoma type. Retrospectively, these data showed that the invasive carcinoma type had the same incidence (10.2%) as preinvasive carcinoma (9.6%). No case diagnosed as early carcinoma (0.8%) was reclassified as of the invasive carcinoma type. Our classification is valid and well tolerated in a routine

Well, the first reason is that we had decided to begin a process of brand redesign. Our product portfolio had grown to the point where we needed a site design that could handle it all. We wanted to create a website that would feature the latest and greatest products from Drexel, and we also wanted to provide a community of like-minded customers with the ability to interact, share, and look at products. Then, when it came time to build out our site (we already had existing site content), it made sense to put that content on the page, in the format of a blog. So, our new site is a combination of a new design, a new look, a new look for our existing site content, and a new look for our brand. We're pretty jazzed about it, and we think you're gonna be too. The second reason we re-launched a site is that we're finally ready to move into the post-manufacturing support period. As many of you know, we're a service-based company, and providing the highest level of support to our customers is something we take very seriously. With the help of
